Renovation update 2/23/18

The demolition of the ground and first floors is complete. They have moved into setting anchors, which is the drilling into the concrete that you hear. The two auditoriums on ground floor have been filled in with foam and concrete will be poured over the foam to create the new floor next week. Please be aware that sometime next week there will be a concrete pump truck and concrete trucks at the north side of the building early in the morning. Right now the schedule is 5-7:30 AM so that they are done by the time things get busy around the College and on Newton Road. I will keep you updated on this as I know more.

The shutdown of the electrical on Tuesday morning went well and the good news is that everything came back on line without incident. Contractors were able to determine what is needed to add new electrical panels and depending on what route is chosen the length of the next shutdown will be determined.

I’ve attached a photo of the auditorium on ground floor showing the infill. As always, please let me know if you see or hear anything that could be a concern. Thanks again for your patience with this process.
