The University of Iowa College of Nursing is seeking applications for a tenure-track faculty position for junior and senior faculty in nursing with a research focus on the treatment and prevention of obesity and related conditions to develop or expand a program of research.

The successful candidate for this position will expand and complement current expertise in biological and socio-behavioral approaches to obesity and strengthen the link between the biology of obesity and translational research. In addition, the new faculty member will teach in the undergraduate and graduate programs, participate in campus-wide and statewide interdisciplinary educational and outreach programs, participate in the interdisciplinary activities of the obesity cluster program, and provide the liaison between the College of Nursing faculty with research activities related to the cluster. Participation in the Obesity Research and Education Initiative will be an important component in performance evaluation.

The college is committed to promoting diversity and inclusion in achieving our education, research, service and practice missions, as demonstrated through our Pillars of Diversity.

As a leader in nursing education, research, and practice innovations, the UI College of Nursing has received national recognition by U.S. News & World Report, ranking nine of its graduate programs among the best in the nation (in comparison to all public and private schools). Areas of research excellence include gerontology, health systems improvement and pain, palliative care and symptom management. Emerging areas of emphasis include management of chronic conditions and health promotion in at-risk populations. Cross-cutting approaches include applied genomics/omics/biomarkers, health information technology, and community engagement.
