The University of Iowa College of Nursing announces an exciting opportunity for a senior faculty member who has a distinguished career in research. As a major research university, we are seeking an individual to join our senior leaders in facilitating scholarship and development of the next generation of scientists in our specific areas of excellence. The Kelting Professorship provides resources and opportunities for continued research engagement, mentorship of faculty and students, and shaping the future of health care and the profession.

Recruitment priorities for senior leadership and contributions include the following areas of research expertise:

- Aging
- Child Health
- Effectiveness/Large Data Set Research
- Genetics/Metabolomics/Biomarkers
- Health Care Information Technology
- Health Systems/Implementation Science
- Pain/Symptom Management
- Palliative Care

The UI College of Nursing has a long-standing tradition of producing nurse leaders for practice, education and research. For more than a century, College of Nursing graduates have achieved distinguished careers as scholars, educators, practitioners, and nurse executives. US News & World Report publishes America's Best Graduate Schools 2014, a guidebook that ranks UI College of Nursing graduate programs among the finest in the nation (in comparison to all public and private schools), with both Gerontological/Geriatric Nursing and Nursing Service Administration (Health Systems) #2 in all public and private schools. At Iowa, we are committed to preparing future nurse leaders with the courage, creativity, and passion to use their skills and knowledge to improve the health of individuals and communities. We invite you to join our efforts to sustain and enhance excellence in academics and scholarship at Iowa.
